

Starting this month, the Ochsner-Xavier Institute for Health Equity and Research \(OXIHER\) will shine a light on some of the most critical health disparities affecting the communities we serve. OXIHER works in alignment with Healthy State to develop effective strategies for addressing health inequities and improving overall population health.

Introducing “OXIHER Health Priorities: Monthly Focus on Wellness”

JULY: Focus on Fibroids

July is National Fibroid Awareness Month, a time to reflect on a health condition that most women will experience by age 50. As noted in Ochsner’s “To Your Health” blog, “uterine fibroids are noncancerous growths of the uterus that often appear during childbearing years.” According to the blog, symptoms include heavy or irregular menstrual cycles, painful menstrual cycles, pelvic pressure, or heaviness from the weight of the uterus and frequent urination caused by the pressure put on the bladder.

Incidence of Fibroids in the Black Community

Fibroids have a significant impact on many women’s reproductive and sexual health, particularly women of color as Black women have a three-fold increased incidence rate of developing uterine fibroids. Black women’s fibroids are diagnosed at earlier ages and often have different responses to medical treatment. Additionally, the size and growth rates of fibroids are greater in Black women, leading to increased hospitalization, myomectomies and hysterectomies when compared to other racial groups.
